Air Pollution in Europe: Clean Air Is Not Equally Distributed

- Europe shows overall air quality improvement, but geographic inequality in PM2.5 exposure remains strong.

Key Findings -

- Europe shows strong spatial inequality in air pollution exposure
- Western & Northern regions generally have lower PM2.5 levels
- Central & Eastern Europe show higher and more persistent pollution

Data Source:

European Environment Agency

[Air quality in Europe is improving overall — but geography still determines exposure inequality]